Hollywood goes lightly to Tiffany's

Audrey Hepburn was the muse behind Breakfast at Tiffany's, a small benefit for the Entertainment Industry Foundation Children's Fund and the Audrey Hepburn Children's Fund. The event was named for the venerable jewelry firm at the heart of Hepburn's iconic film and held at its Beverly Hills branch. Violinists played "Moon River" as guests ate dainty breakfast hors d'oeuvres and ogled gems. "I'm here for the diamonds ... and a fabulous cause, not necessarily in that order," said Daisy Fuentes. Models sporting Holly Golightly's signature upswept chignon, sunglasses and sleeveless black dress went slinking down a runway, conjuring Hepburn's screen character. But as Rebecca Gayheart said, a true re-creation was inconceivable: "I can't imagine anyone else who could play Holly. Can you?" —Monica Corcoran
